

FROM THE DESK OF MIKE BLOOMBERG

Dear

As a three-term mayor of the biggest and one of the most diverse cities in the country, I know how to get things done.

After 9/11, I was proud to help rebuild New York City. We brought it back by investing in more affordable housing, creating good-paying jobs, and expanding access to life-changing education. We also cut the number of uninsured people by nearly 40%, increased the graduation rate by 42%, and expanded health care for working families in New York City.

As a business leader, I built my company out of a single room, growing it to create tens of thousands of jobs and offering high-quality health care and up to six months of paid family leave, regardless of gender. I'm proud of my company, but my parents taught me that being successful means giving back to those in need. That's why I've invested in scholarships for kids who wouldn't be able to afford college otherwise.

So, believe me when I say from personal experience: There is no problem we cannot solve by working hard and working together.

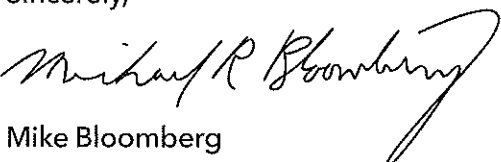

Now, the biggest fight of our lives lies ahead – a fight to beat Trump and rebuild America. I've helped lead the fight against gun violence by starting Everytown for Gun Safety, and we've turned the tide on the NRA. I took real action to confront the climate crisis, helping build a coalition of cities, states, and businesses to cut US carbon emissions by more than any other large nation over the last decade. I'm ready to win this fight, too.

If we're going to beat Trump, we have to do it right. That's why I never have and never will take a dime from special interests. We're not just going to win in 2020 – we're going to win clean. Then, the real work begins.

We're going to save Obamacare and make sure everyone is guaranteed health care – and if you like your insurance, you'll be able to keep it. We're going to protect Social Security and Medicare and create good jobs with good wages. We're going to pass commonsense gun safety reforms to keep our families safe. And we're going to finally take climate change seriously and fight to save the only planet we've got.

But it all starts with beating Trump in 2020. So let's get it done.

Sincerely,

Mike Bloomberg
